BULLETIN DEADLINE: Tuesday 3:00 p.m.

Ut Unum Sint

Ut unum sint is a Latin phrase that means "that they may all be one." These are the words of Jesus after the Last Supper. They are also the words uttered by the late Pope John XXIII, the great architect of Vatican II, in his last days before he succumbed to stomach cancer. Drawing attention to an ivory crucifix opposite his bed he said. "Those open arms have been the program of my pontificate. They said that Christ died for all. Ut unum sint! – That they may all be one!"

Ut Unum Sint is also the title of the encyclical of the late Pope John Paul II issued on May 25, 1995 regarding the unity of the Roman Catholic Church with the Orthodox Church and other Christian communities. In this document, JPII wrote the famous words, "that the church must breathe with her two lungs." It is recalled that in the 11th century, a big rift took place in the church known as the Great Schism. It divided the church into the Roman Catholic to which we belong and the Eastern Orthodox Church.

I find it interesting that these two popes who will be canonized together on April 27, the Feast of the Divine Mercy, though very much different in papal program and personality, are one in their concern and understanding of the importance of unity. Not to be forgotten, though, is the dramatic gesture set by the late Pope Paul VI. Following the direction set by his predecessor John XXIII and in line with the spirit of the Vatican ecumenical council, Pope Paul VI met with Patriarch Athenagoras during his pilgrimage to the Holy Land. Not since the Council of Florence in the fifteenth century had a pope and patriarch meet and taken steps to end the differences between their two churches. The result of that meeting resulted in the lifting of mutual condemnations between the two churches. The event took place in January 5 & 6, 1964.

In commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of that historic event, Pope Francis will meet with Patriarch Bartholomew when he visits the Holy Land in May 24-25, 2014. The Holy Father expressed hope that it will be an inspiration for everyone in his journey of faith and he stressed the importance of promoting friendship and respect between men and women of different religious traditions.

In preparation of that meeting, Archbishop Cordileone and his counterpart, Metropolitan Gerasimos, have arranged for an ecumenical gathering to take place at Holy Cross Orthodox Church in Belmont on Tuesday, April 8, at 7:00 PM. The archbishop invites everyone to this gathering for "salutations in veneration of the relic of the Holy Cross" and that we may all be in communion. Ut unum sint!

Even in our parish, unity is a very much desired goal. There are just too much bickering, conflicts, divisions and factions. It would seem that each one has his own agenda to promote, be it a particular devotion, cultural tradition, ethnic affiliation, ethical value or what not. Before anything else, let our primary identity be that of being Catholic Christians belonging to St. Bruno parish. Let us all rally together embracing the cross of Christ and promote unity. Ut unum sint!

Ut Unum Sint

Ut unum sint es una frase Latina que significa "Que todos sean uno." Estas son las palabras de Jesús después de la Última Cena. También son las palabras pronunciadas por el Papa Juan XXIII, el gran arquitecto del Vaticano II, en sus últimos días antes de sucumbir a cáncer del estómago. Llamando la atención sobre un crucifijo de marfil frente a su cama, dijo. "Esos brazos abiertos han sido el programa de mi pontificado. Dijeron que Cristo murió por todos. Ut unum sint! - Que todos sean uno"!

Ut Unum Sint es también el título de la encíclica del Papa Juan Pablo II, expedido el 25 de mayo de 1995 sobre la unidad de la Iglesia Católica Romana con la Iglesia Ortodoxa y otras comunidades cristianas. En este documento, JPII escribió las famosas palabras, "que la Iglesia debe respirar con sus dos pulmones". Cabe recordar que en el siglo 11, una gran grieta se llevó a cabo en la iglesia conocida como el Gran Cisma. Se dividió la iglesia en la Iglesia Católica Romana a la que pertenecemos y de la Iglesia Ortodoxa Oriental.

Me parece interesante que estos dos papas que serán canonizados juntos el 27 de abril, la Fiesta de la Divina Misericordia, aunque muy diferente en el programa papal y personalidad, son uno solo en su preocupación y comprensión de la importancia de la unidad.

No hay que olvidar, sin embargo, es el dramático gesto fijado por el Papa Pablo VI. Siguiendo la dirección establecida por su predecesor Juan XXIII, y en consonancia con el espíritu del concilio ecuménico Vaticano II, el Papa Pablo VI se reunió con el Patriarca Atenágoras en su peregrinación a Tierra Santa. No desde el Concilio de Florencia en el siglo XV tuvo un papa y patriarca se encuentran y las medidas adoptadas para poner fin a las diferencias entre sus dos iglesias. El resultado de esa reunión tuvo como resultado el levantamiento de las condenas recíprocas entre las dos iglesias. El evento tuvo lugar en el 5 y 6 de enero de 1964.

En conmemoración del quincuagésimo aniversario de ese acontecimiento histórico, el Papa Francisco se reunirá con el patriarca Bartolomé cuando visite Tierra Santa 24 y 25 mayo del 2014. El Santo Padre expresó su esperanza de que será una fuente de inspiración para todo el mundo en su camino de fe y destacó la importancia de promover la amistad y el respeto entre hombres y mujeres de diferentes tradiciones religiosas.

En preparación a esa reunión, el arzobispo Cordileone y su homólogo, el Metropolitan Gerasimos, han contado con una reunión ecuménica que se celebrará en la iglesia ortodoxa de la Santa Cruz en Belmont el martes 8 de abril, a las 7PM. El arzobispo invita a todos a esta reunión para "saludar en veneración de la reliquia de la Santa Cruz" y que todos podamos estar en comunión. Ut unum sint!

Incluso en nuestra parroquia, la unidad es un objetivo muy deseado. Hay demasiadas cosas disputas, conflictos, divisiones y facciones. Parece que cada uno tiene su propia agenda para promover, ya sea una particular devoción, la tradición cultural, la pertenencia étnica, el valor ético o lo que no. Antes que nada, que nuestra identidad primaria sea la de ser cristianos católicos pertenecientes a la Iglesia de San Bruno. Vamos a todos juntos abrazando la cruz de Cristo y promover la unidad. Ut unum sint!
